
Assistance during studies

How does it help you?

Study assistance helps students to cope with the demands of higher education studies, taking into account their specific needs. This service does not include personal assistance.

Who is it for?

Students with specific needs who have been referred to the service as part of a diagnostic interview can use the service.

For example, the service may provide support in the form of note-taking, guiding, help with paperwork or other help related to studying. The specific content of the service will depend on the student's specific needs.

If you need help with organizing your studies, learning effective study strategies, stress management strategies or study planning, click on Study Strategies Training.

How far in advance to apply?

The process for arranging assistance varies according to the individual needs of each student. Assistants can be arranged in advance (classmates or family members in specific cases), in which case requests are processed within a few days.

If you have not arranged assistants in advance, the process of finding, meeting and agreeing rules can take up to a month.
