I studied psychology at Palacký University in Olomouc (Bachelor's) and at Masaryk University in Brno (Master's). I completed comprehensive training in crisis intervention and gained experience at the non-profit organization Mum's smile, which focuses on maternal mental health. As a volunteer coordinator at Volunteering center MUNI HELPS, I supported the volunteer community and its mental well-being through educational activities and the development of methodological materials.

I also gained experience at the social enterprise Teamium, where I provided individual consultations, facilitated group sessions, and focused on education and support for team collaboration. Over time, I began to concentrate more on individual coaching. With clients, I primarily work on complex and hard-to-define topics. Together we look for ways to clarify and understand these issues in order to foster their authenticity, competencies, and expand their range of opportunities and potential.

Currently, I focus mainly on individual coaching sessions and also work as a psychologist for students with special needs at the Carolina Centre.

A five-year study of psychology was my first step towards discovering myself and, through it, the people around me. After studying in Bratislava, I went to study in Prague, where I completed a crisis intervention course, online counseling and an individual coaching course. I teach workshops on the topics of emotions, self-love, authenticity, working with stress and mindfulness. I have experience working with people with psychological problems and with victims of domestic violence. I have been working with teenagers and youth in crisis situations and difficult life periods for a long time. I am interested in a holistic view and combine body work with coaching and counseling techniques. Together with clients, we co-create a supportive space and seek unique resources for finding an authentic path through life's challenges.
